The idea with the article is that media such as movies, news, and television has a huge input of what we think and do in the real world. Many positive and negative traits come from this. The way women are viewed in these media portray them as just objects, an unintended consequence of having many women in these positions of sex and in background characters such as wives and maids. The idea of portraying women as objects is basically dehumanizing them in the show however I don't think that the dehumanization is being translated in real life as most people know that it is just a show full of drama and many of its situations dehumanizations of women are not realistic. In addition most people already believe that it is wrong to treat people unfairly. However this objectification of women is truly wrong as many women involved suffer from this, it portrays a horrible self image of oneself all their values goes into beauty "Men look at women. Women watch themselves being looked at. This determines the relation of women to themselves." (Andi pg. 7). Media mostly affects women, it is simply a super dangerous habit that is out of themselves. In my opinion there are many causes to it. One such media is made for men, "male gaze? when we look at images in art or on screen, we're seeing them as a man might because those images are constructed to be seen by men" (Andi pg. 8). I think part of the problem is that it is too easy to please the male mind as most of it is just visual. However the same can be said that is made for women. There are many romance type movies where they idolize men through romance however men don't really care or know about being objectified in these movies. A part of the issue is that too many people put too much value in women's bodies.

The idea of the article linguistics and how people can associate images text sounds as having arbitrary meaning that everyone agrees to and knows. Language is simply a huge amount of text and sound that are representative of how we want to express ourselves in addition to a couple of grammar rules and customs. In addition the article tells how language is not constant and is changing, “Words constantly go out of common usage, and new phrases are coined, The problem is especially acute in translation over time” (Stuart pg. 24). I think it is very interesting how words can shift their meaning over time as there is no absolute meaning of a word and over thousands and thousands of years there would be so many changes to words that a new language is created even things like grammar structure or the alphabet can change creating a completely new thing. For example Latin was the original language of most of Europe and now through a lot of isolation a lot of languages were created including English, Spanish, French and German. Language is not the only thing that changes ideas also change, “BLACK with everything that is dark, evil, forbidding, devilish. dangerous and sinful. And yet, think of how the perception of black people in America in the 1960s changed after the phrase Black is Beautiful” (Stuart pg. 32). Things like ideas, morals and culture are changing due to many reasons such as changing technology constantly passing down old knowledge due to the death and life cycle and worldwide events like wars and disasters. For example things like the role of women in society change due to many of them having to take on their male counterpart roles as the men went to World War II. These morals and cultures are always changing and living life in a certain way is not always the correct way. Sometimes there are flaws or gaps in our reasoning that cause our morality to change like racism and how immoral it is. People had to realize that it is just wrong.
